Kirksey Architecture COVID-19 Update

To our family of clients, colleagues, and our community partners:

We'd like to take a moment to reiterate Kirksey's commitment to our employees, our clients, our partners, and our communities. Our team is taking proactive measures to maintain healthy work environments in our Houston and Austin offices while continuing to provide excellent service.

What this means for you:

- We will continue to prioritize the health of our employees and their families. Our people are our greatest resource.
- We remain committed to our clients and our projects and have implemented remote technology to ensure our project teams stay connected, engaged, and continue to meet deadlines.
- We have restricted all business travel, in-person meetings, and visitors to our offices to limit the potential spread of the virus. Business continuity means creatively adapting to our circumstances.
- We take these measures to protect our employees, those who are immunocompromised, and to continue to serve our clients and our community. We will continue to monitor the situation as it evolves.

It's business as (un)usual. We're here for you. Stay healthy and be safe.
